

Course planning grid

Make a plan for a course you teach. Go beyond the typical university course outline – which often consists of little more than a brief list of content – by including elements from the curriculum development model. Use a table like that below, so that you can ensure that elements are consistent with each other.

Aims	Fundamental concepts	Learning activities