Text 5.13: Blind Harry. Wallace (c.1478)

BUKE FYRST

OUR antecessorwis, that we sulde of reide,
And hald in mynde than noblle worthi deid;
We lat oursilwe, throw werra sleuthfulness;
And castis ws euir til vthir besynes.
And continually occupy ourselves with other business.
Till honour enynmis is our haile entent,
It has beyne seyne in thir tymys bywend;
Our ald ennymys cummyn of Saxonyx blud,
That neuyr yet to Scotland walde do gud,
But necessarily and against their will,
Quhow gret kyndnes thar has beyne kyrth thaim till.
It is weyle knawyne on mony diuerss syde,
How thay haff wrocht in to thair mychty pryde,
To hald Scotlande at wndyr euirmar.
But god abuff has maid thar m
To hald Scotlande at wndyr euirmar.
How they have tried in their mighty pride,
It is well known on diverse sides,
How they have tried in their mighty pride,
To hold Scotland down evermore.
But god above has lessened their might:

(Blind Harry (1820). Wallace. Edinburgh: Constable & Blackwood)

First Book

Our ancestors, who we should read of,
And hold in mind their noble worthy deeds,
We let pass by, through veritable slothfulness;
And continually occupy ourselves with other business.
To honor our enemies is our whole intention,
It has been seen in bygone times;
Our old enemies came of Saxon blood,
Who never yet to Scotland would do good,
But necessarily and against their will,
How great kindness there has been revealed to them.
It is well known on diverse sides,
How they have tried in their mighty pride,
To hold Scotland down evermore.
But god above has lessened their might:

Texts in EModE

Diaries and historical accounts

Text 6.9: from the diary of Henry Machyn (1550-1563)

The xxv day of Marche, the wyche was owre lade [day] ther was as gret justes as youe have sene at the tylt at Westmynster, the chalyngers was a Spaneard and ser Gorge Haward; and all ther men, and ther horses truymyd in whyt, and then cam the Kyng and a gret mene all in bluw, and truymyd with yellow, and ther elments with gret tuyffes of blue and yellow fether, and all ther veffelers and ther fotemen, and ther armorers, and a compene lyke Turkes red in cremesun saten gownes and capes, and with fachyons, and gret targets; and all crystyn solles.The xiiij day of Aprell was done, one of the menyster as sone as he had spokyn he druw his wod-knyffe, and hyt the prest on the hed and struck hym a grett blowe, and after ran after hym and struck him on the hand, and cloyffe ys hand a grett way and after on the harme a grett wond; and ther was scyche a cry and showtt as has not byne; and after he was taken and cared to presun, and after examynyd wher-for he dyd ytt.

Text 6.11: William Godolphin: a letter to Thomas Cromwell (Helston, Cornwall, 1532)

To the worschepphull Mayster Thomas Cromwell one off the Kyngys moste honerably Covnsell be thys delyvroyd My devte w' dev reuerens yn my most vmbly wyresse don pleseyth ytt your myysterschyppe to onderstond that I Receyved your gentylly and loyng letter to me derecyd datyd the ffurst daye off Iune by your sservant herry the tenouer ther off was to have ij proper fflows for the ffett of wrastelyng I have send to your myysterschyppe ij off my hovsold sservant whyche your sservant herry dyd very well know that yn thes parthes thay wer takyn ffor the beste and the suryste ffor that ffett yowr mayst schyppe may truste them ffor ther trueth I wilbe bovnd yn as moche as I am worthe ther ynglyssse ys not perffett I couldnot makke no fflerre secrche to try any better then thos the tyme was so schort as your sservant herry can asssertn yow but yn Contenent a pone the syth of off your letter y cavysyd wrastelyng gamys to be made to the entent I wolde have the beste yff ytt wolde plesse you to avertes the kyng ys good grace yff he comevnder me by yss letter or oder wyssse to serve hym yn thyss lernay I wilbrynge w' me vij or viijth ther schalbe no better off ther bynges comevne owte off that parthes and at my comayng vypp your myysterschyppes schalle see them all tryed byffor any man see them doo any ffett and yff ye leeke any off them better then thys ij ye schalhave your pleysur yn thys and yn all that ever I can woor d with[y]ylle I leye god wyllingly how euer have yow yn hyss blessydy keppyng w' longe lyffe and prosperyte wrytyn at my prow howsse the xiiijth day off Iune youwr to yhs lyttly power
WHEN as by the travell, and diligence of some godly, and zealous preachers, and Gods blessing on their labours; as

George Colson de gillygatt Tayler etatis xvij anor

Super primo et secundo articulis dicit that for his

Text 6.13: Abuse: a court testimony: Roger Jackson (Yorkshire, 1597)

Being thus constrained to leave their native soyle and countrie, their lands and livings, and all their freinds and familliar acquaintance, it was much, and thought marvelous by many. But to goe into a countrie they knew not (but by hearsay) when they must leare a new language, and get their livings they knew not how, it being a dear place, and subjecte to the miseries of warr, it was by many thought an adventure almost desperate, a case intolerable, and a miserie worse then death. Especiallie seeing they were not acquainted with truds nor traffique (by which that countrie doth subsiste) but had only been used to a plaine countrie life, and the inocente trade of husbandry. But these things did not dismay them (though they did some times trouble them) for their desires were set on the ways of god, and to inuoye his ordinances; but they rested on his providence, and knew whom they had beleived. Yet this was not all, for though they could not stay, yet were they not suffered to goe, but the ports and havens were shut against them, so as they were faine to seek secrete means of conuenice, and to bribe and fee the mariners, and give extermad rates for their passages. And yet were they often times betrayed (of many of them) and both they and their goods intercepted and surprized, and thereby put to great trouble and charge, of which I will give an instance or two, and omitte the rest.

Ther was a large companie of them purposed to get passage at Boston in Lincoln-shire, and for that end had hired a shipe wholly to them selves, and made agreement with the maister to be ready at a ceraine day, and take them and their goods in, at a conveniente place, wher they accordingly would all attende in readiness. So after long waiting, and large expences (though he kepte not day with them) yet he came at length and tooke them in, in the night. But when he had them and their goods abord, he betrayed them, havinge before hand complotted with the serchers and other officers so to doe. Who tooke them, and put them into open boats, and ther rifled and ransaked them, searching them to their shirts for money, yea even the women furneder then became modestie; and then caried them back into the towne, and made them a spectacle and wondrer to the multitude, which came flocking on all sids to behould them. Being thus first, by the chatch-poule officers, rifled, and stripte of their money, books, and much other goods; they were presented to the majestrates, and messengers sente to informe the lords of the Counsell of them; and so they were committed to ward. Indeed the majestrats used them courteously, and shewed them what favour they could; but could not deliver them, till order came from the Counsell-table. But the issue was that after a months imprisonment, the greatest parte were dismisse, and sent to the places from whence they came; but of the principall were still kept in prison, and bound over to the Assises.

Text 6.15: from John Winthrop. Excerpts from his Journal. (1631-41)

[February 10, 1631.] The frost brake up; and after that, though we had many snows and sharp frost, yet they continued not, neither were the waters frozen up as before. It hath been observed, ever since this bay was planted by Englishmen, viz., seven years, that at this day the frost hath broken up every year. The poorer sort of people (who lay long in tents, etc.) were much afflicted with the scurvy, and many died, especially at Boston and Charlestown; but when this ship came and brought store of juice of lemons, many recovered speedily. It hath been always observed here, that such as fell into discontent, and lingered after their former conditions in England, fell into the scurvy and died. …

[September 25, 1638] The court, taking into consideration the great disorder general through the country in costliness of apparel, and following new fashions sent the elders of the churches, and conferred with them about it, and laid it upon them, as belonging to them, to redress it, by urging it upon the consciences of their people, which they promised to do. But little was done about it; for divers of the elders' wives, etc., were in some measure partners in this general disorder. …

[December 15, 1640.] About this time there fell out a thing very worthy of observation. Mr.Winthrop the younger, one of the magistrates, having many books in a chamber where there was corn of divers sorts, had among them one wherein the Greek testament, the psalms and the common prayer were bound together. He found the common prayer eaten with mice, every leaf of it, and not any other touched, nor any other of his books, though there were above a thousand.

[April 13, 1641.] A godly woman of the church of Boston, dwelling sometimes in London, brought with her a parcel of very fine linen of great value, which she set her heart too much upon, and had been at charge to have it all newly washed, and curiously folded and pressed, and so left it in press in her parlor over night. She had a negro maid went into the room very late, and let fall some snuff of the candle upon the linen, so as by the morning all the linen was burned to tinder, and the boards underneath, and some stools and a part of the wainscot burned, and never perceived by any in the house, though some lodged in the chamber over head, and no ceiling between. But it pleased God that the loss of this linen did her much good, both in taking off her heart from worldly comforts, and in preparing her for a far greater affliction by the untimely death of her husband, who was slain not long after at Isle of Providence. (from: P. Miller (ed.) The American Puritans. Garden City, 1956, passim)

Text 6.1: Samuel Pepys: Excerpts from his diary (1660ff)
January 1, 1660] Blessed be God, at the end of the last year I was in very good health, without any sense of my old pain but upon taking of cold. I lived in Axe Yard, having my wife and servant Jane, and no more in family than us three. My wife, after the absence of her terms for seven weeks, gave me hopes of her being with child, but on the last day of the year she hath them again. The condition of the state was thus. Viz. the rump, after being disturbed by my Lord Lambert, was lately returned to sit again. The officers of the army all forced to yield. Lawson lies still in the river and Monke is with his army in Scotland. Only my Lord Lambert is not yet come in to the Parliament; nor is it expected that he will, without being forced to it. The new Common Council of the City doth speak very high; and hath sent to Monke their sword-bearer, to acquaint him with their desires for a free and full Parliament, which is at present the desires and the hopes and expectation of all. My own private condition very handsome; and esteemed rich, but ended very poor, besides my goods of my house and my office, which at present is somewhat uncertain. Mr Downing master of my office.

7 February. Boys do now cry “Kiss my Parliament!” instead of “Kiss my arse!” so great and general a contempt is the Rump come to among men, good and bad.

11 February. I walked in [Westminster] Hall, where I heard news of a letter from Monke, who was now gone into the city again and did resolve to stand for the sudden filling up of the House; and it was very strange how the countenance of men in the Hall was all changed with joy in half an hour’s time. Thence we took coach for the city to Guildhall, where the hall was full of people expecting Monke and Lord Mayor to come thither, and all very joyful. And indeed I saw many people give the soldiers drink and money, and all along in the streets cried, “God bless them!” and extraordinary good words. In Cheapside there was a great many bonfires, and Bow bells and all the bells in all the churches as we went home were a-ringing. Hence we went homewards, it being about 10 o’clock. But the common joy that was everywhere to be seen! The number of bonfires, there being fourteen between St Dunstan’s and Temple Bar. And at Strand Bridge I could at one view tell thirty-one fires. In King Streete, seven or eight, and all along burning and roasting and drinking for rumps – there being rumps tied upon sticks and carried up and down. The bouchers at the Maypole in the Strand rang a peal with their knives when they were going to sacrifice their rump. On Ludgate Hill there was one turning of the spit, that had a rump tied upon it, and another basting of it. Indeed, it was past imagination, both the greatness and the suddenness of it. At one end of the street, you would think there was a whole lane of fire, and so hot that we were fain to keep still on the further side merely for heat.

8 July. To Whitehall to chapel, where I got in with ease by going before the Lord Chancellor with Mr Kipps. Here I heard very good musique, the first time that I remember ever to have heard the organs and singing-men in surplices in my life.

18 August. To the Cockepitt play, the first that I have had time to see since my coming from sea, The Layall Subject, where one Kinaston, a boy, acted the Dukes sister but made the loveliest lady that ever I saw in my life – only, her voice not very good. After the play done, we three went to drink, and by Captain Ferref’s means, Mr Kinaston and another that acted Archas the Generall came to us and drank with us. Thence home by coach; and after being trimmed, leaving my wife to look after her little bich, which was just now a-whelping, I to bed.

4 September. To Axeyard to my house; where standing at the door, Mrs Diana comes by, whom I took into my house upstairs and there did dally with her a great while, and find that in Latin nulla puella negat. So home by water; and there sat up late, putting g my papers in order and my money also, and teaching my wife her musique leson, in which I take great pleasure. So to bed.

11 September. At Sir W. Battens with Sir W. Pen we drank our morning draught, and from thence for an houre in the office and dispatch a little business. Dined with Sir W. Battens; and by this time I see that we are like to have a very good correspondency and neighbourhood, but chargeable. All the afternoon at home looking over my carpenters. At night I called Tho. Hater out of the office to my house to sit and talk with me. After he was gone I caused the girls to wash the wainscote of our parlor, which she did very well; which caused my wife and I good sport. Up to my chamber to read a little, and write my diary for three or four days past.

25 September. To the office, where Sir W. Batten, Colonell Slingsby, and I sat a while; and Sir R. Ford coming to us about some business, we talked together of the interest of this kingdom to have a peace with Spain and a... war with France and Holland – where Sir R. Ford talked like a man of great reason and experience. And afterwards did send for a cup of tee (a China drink) of which I never had drank before) and went away.

13 October. I went out to Charing Cross to see Major-General Harrison hanged, drawn, and quartered – which was done there – he looking cheerfully as any man could do in that condition. He was presently cut down and his head and his heart shown to the people, at which there was great shouts of joy. It is said that he said that he was sure to come shortly at the right hand of Christ to judge them that now have judged him. And that his wife doth expect his coming again. Thus it was my chance to see the King beheaded at Whitehall and to see the first blood shed in revenge for the blood of the King at Charing Cross.

1 November. This morning Sir W. Pen and I were mounted early. And have very merry discourse all the way [to Walthamstow], he being very good company. We came to Sir Wm. Battens, where he lies very like a prince and we were made very welcome. Among other things he showed us a chaise which he calls King Harrys chair, where he that sits down is caught with two irons that come round about him, which makes good sport. Here dined with us two ore three more country gentlemen; among the rest, Mr Christmas my old schoolfellow, with whom I had much talk. He did remember that I wasa great Roundhead when I was a boy, and I was much afeared that he would have remembered the words that I said the day that the King was beheaded (that were I to preach upon him, my text should be: “The memory of the wicked shall rot”); but I found afterward that he did go away from schoole before that time. He did make us good sport in imitating Mr. Case, Ash, and Nye, the ministers – which he did very well. But a deadly drinker he is, and grown exceeding fat.

20 November. Mr Sheply and I to the new playhouse nearr Lincolnes Inn Fields (which was formerly Gibbons’s tennis court), where the play of Beggner’s Bush was newly begun. And so we went in and saw it. It was well acted (and here I saw the first time one Moone, who is said to be the best actor in the world, lately come over with the King); and endeed it is the finest playhouse, I believe, that ever was in England. And so home, where I found the house in a washing pickle; and my wife in a ver...

1661

28 January. To the Theatre, where I saw again The Lost Lady, which doth now please me better then before. And here, I sitting behind in a dark place, a lady spat backward upon me by a mistake, not seeing me. But after seeing her to be a very pretty lady, I was not troubled at it all.

4 May. Lords Day. Lay long, talking with my wife. Then up and Mr Holliard came to me and let me blood, about 16 ounces, I being exceedingly full of blood, and very good. I begun to be sick; but lying upon my back, I was presently well again and did give him 5s for his pains; and so we parted. And I to my chamber to write down my journall.

1 August. At the office all the afternoon, till evening to my chamber; where, God forgive me, I was sorry to hear that Sir W. Pens maid Betty was gone away yesterday, for I was in hopes to have had a bout with her before she had gone, she being very pretty. I have also a mind to my own wench, but I dare not, for feare she should prove honest and refuse and then tell my wife.

1663

12 May. A little angry with my wife for minding nothing now but the dancing maister [Pembleton], having him come twice a day, which is a folly.

26 May. Nothing could get the business out of my head, I fearing that this afternoon, by my wife’s sending every[one] abroad and knowing that I must be at the office, she hath appointed [Pembleton] to come. This is my devilish jealousy; which I pray God may be false, but it makes a very hell in my mind; which the God of Heaven remove, or I shall be very unhappy. So to the office, where we sat a while. By and by, my mind being in great trouble, I went home to see how things were; and there I find as I doubted, Mr Pembleton with my wife and nobody else in the house, which made me almost mad. And Lord, bow my jealousy wrought so far, that I went safely up to see whether any of the beds were out of order or no, which I found not; but that did not content me, but I stayed all the evening walking, and though anon my wife came up to me and would have spoke of business to me, yet I construed it to be but impudence; and though my heart was full, yet I did say nothing, being in great doubt what to do. So at night suffered them to go all to bed and late put myself to bed in great discontent, and so to sleep.

27 May. So I waked by 3 a-clock, my mind being troubled; and so took occasion by making water to wake my wife, and after having lain till past 4 a-clock, seemed going to rise, though I did it only to see what she would do; and so going out of bed, she took hold of me and would know what ailed me; and after many kind and some cross words, I begun to tax her discretion in yesterday's business, but she quickly told me my owne, knowing well enough that it was my old disease of jealousy; which I disowned, but to no purpose. After an hour's discourse, sometimes high and sometimes kind, I find very good reason to think that her freedom with him was very great and more then was convenient, but with no evil intent.

29 May. To my brother [Tom's] to speak with him, and so home and in my way did take two turns forward and backward through the Fleece Ally to see a couple of pretty whores that stood off the doors there; and God forgive me, I could scarce stay myself from going into their houses with them, so apt is my nature to evil, after once, as I have these two days, set upon pleasure again.

1665

12 August. The people die so, that now it seems they are fain to carry the dead to be buried by daylight, the nights not sufficient to do it in. And my Lord Mayor commands people to be within at 9 at night, all (as they say) that the sick may have liberty to go abroad for ayre.

15 August. Up by 4 a-clock and walked to Greenwich, where called at Captain Cockes and to his chamber, he being in bed – where something put my last night's dream into my head, which I think is the best that ever was dreamed – which was, that I had my Lady Castlemayne in my armes and was admitted to use all the dalliance I desired with her, and then dreamed that this could not be awake but that it was only a dream. But that since it was a dream and that I took so much real pleasure in it, what a happy thing it would be, if when we are in our graves (as Shakespeare resembles it), we could dream, and dream but such dreams as this – that then we should not need to be so fearful of death as we are this plague-time.

16 August. Up; and after doing some necessary business about my accounts at home, to the office and there with Mr Hater wrote letters. And I did deliver to him my last will, one part of it to deliver to my wife when I am dead. Thence to the Exchange, which I have not been a great while. But Lord, how sad a sight it is to see the streets empty of people, and the people die so, that now it seems they are fain to carry the dead to be buried by daylight, the nights not sufficient to do it in. Thence to the Exchange, which I have not been a great while. But Lord, how sad a sight it is to see the streets empty of people, and very few upon the Change – jealous of every door that one sees shut up, lest it should be the plague – and about us, two shops in three, if not more, generally shut up. (from: Pepys, S. (1978) R. Latham and W. Matthews (eds.) The Diary of Samuel Pepys. London: Bell & Hyman)

Religious Texts
Various Translations of the Bible

Text 6.3: Matthew 1: 18-21 (roman type = Tyndale; italic type = KJV)

\[\text{The byrthe of Iesus Christ was on this wyse. When his mother Mary was betrouthed to Joseph before they came to dwell to gedder she was fou[n]de with chylde by ye holy gost.}\]

\[\text{Then Joseph her husbande being a perfect ma[n] and loth to make an ensample of hir was minded to put her awaye secretly.}\]

\[\text{Whill he thus thought behold ye angell of ye Lorde appered vnto him in a dreame saynge: Joseph ye sonne of David feare not to take vnto ye Mary thy wyfe. For that which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost.}\]

\[\text{She shall brynge forth a sonne and thou shalt call his name Iesus. For he shall save his peple from their sins.}\]

(Tyndale at: http://www.studylight.org)

Text 6.16: Psalm 23 in six different translations

Text 6.16a: Wycliffe (1388)
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Text 6.16b: Coverdale Bible (1535)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Text 6.16c: Rheims-Douay (1610)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Text 6.16d: KJV (1611)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Text 6.16e: Bay Psalm Book (1640)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>The Lord to me a shepherd is, Want therefore shall not I. He in the folds of tender grass Doth cause me down to lie:</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
To waters calm me gently leads,
Restore my soul doth he,
He doth in paths of righteousness
For his name’s sake lead me.

Yea though in valley of death’s shade
I walk, none ill I’ll fear:
Because thou art with me, thy rod
And staff my comfort are.

For me a table thou hast hast spread.
In presence of my foes:
Thou dost anoint my head with oil,
My cup it overflows.

Goodness and mercy surely shall
All my days follow me:
And in the Lord’s house I shall dwell
So long as days shall be.

(Heath Anthology, vol. 1, 334f)

1 The LORD is my shepherd, I shall not want.
2 He makes me lie down in green pastures;
   he leads me beside still waters;
3 he restores my soul.
   He leads me in right paths for his name’s sake.
4 Even though I walk through the darkest valley,
   I fear no evil;
   for you are with me;
   your rod and your staff — they comfort me.
5 You prepare a table before me in the presence of my enemies;
   you anoint my head with oil;
   my cup overflows.
6 Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life, and I shall dwell in the house of the LORD my whole life long

Text 6.17: The Book of Common Prayer: Matins (1549)

AN ORDRE
FOR MATTYSN DAYLY THROUGH THE YERE.

The Priest being in the quier (choir), shall beginyn with a loude voyce the Lordes prayer, called the Pater noster.

OURE father, whiche arte in heaven, hallowed by thy name. Thy kyngdom come. Thy wyll be done in earth as it is in heaven. Geve us this daye our dayly bread. And forgeve us oure trespasses, as we forgeve them that trespassa agaynst us. And leade us not into temptacion. But deliver us from evell. Amen.

Then lykenwyse be shall say,

O Lorde, open thou my lippes.

And my mouthe shall shewe forth thy prayse.

O God, make spede to save me.

O Lorde make haste to helpe me.

Glory be to the father, and to the sonne, and to the holye ghost. As it was in the begynning, is now, and ever shalbe, world without ende. Amen.

Prayse ye the Lorde.

And from Easter to Trinitie Sondays,
Then shalbe saied or song without any Invitatori this Psalme, Venite exultemus, etc. in Englishe, as foloweth:

Psal. xcv.

O COME lette us syng unto the Lorde : lette us hartely rejoyce in the strengthe of oure salvacion.
Let us come before his presence with thankesgeving : and shewe ourselfe glad in hym with Psalmes.
For the Lord is a great God : and a great kyng above all goddes.
In his hande are all the corners of the yearth : and the strength of the hylles is his also.
The sea is his, and he made it : and, his handes prepared the drye lande.
O come, let us worship and fall downe : and kneele before the Lorde oure maker.
For he is (the Lord) oure God : and we are the people of his pasture, and the shepe of his handes.
To daye, yf ye wyll heare his voyce, harden not your hartes as in the provocacion, and as in the daie of temptacion in the wildernes.
When your fathers tempted me : proved me, and sawe my workes.
Fourtye yeares long was I greved with this generacion, and sayed : it is a people that do erre in their hartes : for they have not knowen my wayes.
Unto whom I sware in my wrath : that they shoulde not entre into my rest.
Glory be to the father, and to the sonne : and to the holy ghost. As it was in the beginnyng, is nowe, and ever shalbe: worlde without end. Amen.

Then shal folow certaine Psalmes in ordre as they been appointed in a table made for ye purpose, except there be propre Psalmes appointed for that day. And at the ende of every Psalme throughout the yeare, and lykewyse in the ende of Benedictus, Benedicite, Magnificat, and Nunc Dimittis shalbe repeated.

Glory be to the father and to the sonne, &c.

Then shalbe read ii. lessons distinctly with a loude voice, that the people maye heare. The fyrt of the olde testament, the second of the newe. Like as they be appoynted by the Kalender, excepte there be propre lessons assigned for that daye: The ministre that readeth the lesson, standing and turning hym so as he maye beste be hearde of all suche as be present. And before every lesson, the minister shall saye thus:

The firste, seconde, iii. or iv. Chapter of Genesis, or Exodus, Matthew, Marke, or other lyke as is appoynted in the Kalender: And in the ende of every Chapter, he shall saye.

¶ Here endeth suche a Chapter of suche a booke.

And (to thende the people may the better heare) in such places where they doe syng, there shall the lessons be songe in a playne tune after the maner of distincte readyng: and lykewyse the Epistle and Gospell.

After the firste lesson shall followe Te Deum laudamus in Englishe, dayly throughout the yeare, excepte in Lent, all the which tym e in the place of Te Deum shalbe used Benedicite omnia Opera Domini Domino, in Englyshe as foloweth:

Te Deum Laudamus.

We praise the, O God, we knowlage thee to be the Lorde.
All the earth doeth wursiphe thee, the father everlastyng.
To thee al Angells cry aloud, the heavens and all the powers therin.
To thee Cherubin, and Seraphin continually doe crye.
Holy, holy, holy, Lorde God of Sabaoth.
Heaven and earth are replenyshed with* the majestie of thy glory,

The glorious company of the Apostles, praise thee.
The goodly felowshyp of the Prophete, praise thee.
The noble arnme of Martyrs, praise thee.
The holy churche throughout all the worlde doeth knowlage thee.
The father of an infinite majestye.
Thy honourable, true, and onely sonne.

The holy gost also beeying the coumforter.*
Thou art the kyng of glory, O Chryste.
Thou art the everlastyng sonne of the father.
Whan thou tookest upon thee to delyver manne, thou dydest not abhorre the virgins wombe.
Whan thou haddest overcome the sharpenesse of death, thou diddest open the kyngdome of heaven to all belevers.
Thou sittest on the ryght hande of God, in the glory of the father.
We beleve that thou shalt come to be our judge.
We therfore praye thee, helpe thy servauntes, whom thou haste redemed with thy precious bloud.
Make them to be noumbred with thy sainctes, in glory everlastyng.
O Lorde, save thy people: and blesse thyne heritage.
Governem, and lift them up for ever.
Day by day we magnifie thee.
And we wursiphe thy name ever world without ende.
Vouchsafe, O Lorde, to kepe us this daye without synne.
O Lorde, have mercy upon us: have mercy upon us.
O Lorde, let thy mercy lighten upon us: as our trust is in thee.
O Lorde, in thee have I trusted: let me never be confounded.

Benedictus. Luc. i

BLESSED be the lorde God of Israel: for he hath visited and redeemed his people.
And hath lyfted up an home of salvacion to us: in the house of his servaunt David.
As he spake by the mouth of his holy Prophete: which hath bene syns the world began.
That we shoulde be saved from our enemies: and from the handes of all that hate us.
To perfourme the mercy promised to our fathers: and to remember his holy covenaunt.
To perfourme the othe [oath] whiche he swere to our father Abraham: that he would geve us.
That we being delivered out of the handes of our enemies might serve him without feare,
In holynesse and rytghteousnes before him all the dayes of our lyfe.
And thou childe, shalte bee called the prophete of the highest: for thou shalte goe before the face of the Lord, to prepare his waies.
To geve knowledge of salvacion unto his people: for the remission of their sinnes.
Through the tender mercie of our god: whereby the dayespryng from an hygh hath visited us;
To geve lighte to them that sitte in darkenes, and in the shadowe of death: and to guide our fete into the way of peace.
Glory be to the father, &c.
As it was in the beginnyng, &c.

Then shalbe said dailye through the yere the prayers foloowing, as well at evensong as at Matins, all devoutely kneelyng.
Lorde have mercie upon us. Christe have mercie upon us. Lorde, have mercie upon us.

Then the minister shal say the Crede and the Lordes praier in englishe, with a loude voice, &c.

But deliver us from eivill. Amen.

O Lorde, shewe thy mercie upon us.

And graunt us thy salvacion.

O Lorde save the kyng.

And mercifully heare us when we cal upon thee.

Indue thy ministers with righteousness.

And make thy chosen people joyfull.

O Lorde, save thy people.

And blesse thyne inheritaunce.

Geve peace in oure time, O Lorde.

Because there is none other that fyghteth for us, but only thou, O God.

O God, make cleane our hartes within us.

And take not thyne holye spirite from us.

The lorde be with you.

And with thy spirite.

A MODELL OF CHRISTIAN CHARITIE
Written
On Board the Arrabella,
On the Atlantick Ocean.
By the Honorable John Winthrop Esquire.

In His passage, (with the great Company of Religious people, of which Christian Tribes he was the Brave Leader and famous Governor;) from the Island of Great Britaine, to New-England in the North America.
Anno 1630

CHRISTIAN CHARITIE.
A Modell Hereof.
God Almightye in his most holy and wise providence hath so disposed of the Condiccion of mankinde, as in all times some must be rich some poore, some highe and eminent in power and dignitie; others meane and in subieccion.

The Reason Hereof.

1. Reas: First, to hold conformity with the rest of his workeis, being delighted to shewe forthe the glory of his wisdome in the variety and differance of the Creatures and the glory of his power, in ordering all these differences for the preservacion and good of the whole, and the glory of his greatnes that as it is the glory of princes to haue many officers, soe this great King will haue many Stewards counting himselfe more honoured in dispenceing his guifts to man by man, then if hee did it by his owne immediate hand.

2. Reas: Secondly, That he might haue the more occasion to manifest the worke of his Spirit: first, vpon the wicked in moderateing and restraineing them: soe that the riche and mighty should not eate vpp the poore, nor the poore, and disped rise vpp against their superiors, and shake off their yeoke; sly in the regenerate in exercising his graces in them, as in the greate ones, thire loue mercy, gentlenes, temperance etc., in the poore and inferiour sorte, thire faihte patience, obedience etc:

3. Reas: Thirdly, That every man might haue need of other, and from hence they might be all knitt more nearly together in the Bond of brotherly affeccion: from hence it appeares plainly that noe man is made more honourable then another or more wealthy etc., out of any particular and singular respect to himselfe but for the glory of his Creator and the Common good of the Creature, Man;

Thus stands the cause betweene God and vs, wee are entered into Covenant with him for this worke, wee haue taken out a Commission, the Lord hath giuen vs lease to drawe our owne Articles wee haue professed to enterize these Accions upon these and these ends, wee haue herevpon besought him of favour and blessing: Now if the Lord shall please to heare vs, and bring vs in peace to the place wee desire, then hath fire ratified this Covenant and sealed our Commission, [and]-will expect a strickt performance of the Articles contained in it, but if wee shall neglect the observacion of these Articles which are the ends wee haue propounded, and dissembling with our God, shall fall to embrace- this present world and prosecute our carnall intencions seeking great things for our selues and our posterity, the Lord will surely break out in wrathe against vs be revenged of such a perjured people and make vs knowe: the price of the breach of such a Covenant.’

Now the onely way to avoyde this shipwracke and to provide for our posterity is to followe the Counsell of Micah, to doe Justly, to love mercy, to walke humbly with our God, for this end, wee must be knitt together in this worke as one man, wee must entertaine each other in brotherly Affecion, wee must be willing to abridge our selues of our superfluities, for the supply of others necesseties, wee must vphold a familiar Commerce together in all meekenes, gentlenes, patience and liberallity, wee must delight in eache other, make othersCondicions owne reioyce together, mourne together, labour, and suffer together, allways hauing before our eyes our Commission and Community in the worke, our Community as members of the same body, soe shall wee keepe the vnite of the spirit in the bond of peace, the Lord will be our God and delight to dwell among vs, as his owne people and will command a blessing vpon vs in all our ways, soe that wee shall see much more of his wisdome power goodnes and truthe then formerly wee haue beene acquainted with, wee shall finde that the God of Israel is among vs, when tenn of vs shall be able to resist a thousand of our enemies, when hee shall make vs be a prayse and glory, that men shall say of succeeding plantacions: the lord make it like that of New England: for wee must Consider that wee shall be as a Citty vpon a Hill, the ies of all people are vpon vs; soe that if wee shall deale falsely with our god in this worke wee haue vndertaken and soe cause him to withdrawe his present help from vs, wee shall be made a story and a by-word through the world, wee shall open the mouths of enemies to speake euel of the ways of god and all professors for Gods sake; wee shall shame the faces of many of gods worthy seruants, and cause their prayers to be turned into Curses vpon vs till wee be consumed out of the good land whether wee are goeing:

The man that met thee is one Worldly Wiseman, and rightly is he so called; partly because he savoreth only the doctrine of this world ... (therefore he always goes to the town of Morality to church) and partly because he loveth that doctrine best, for it saveth him best from the cross, ... (Bunyan 1677/78: First Stage)

THE FIRST STAGE

As I walked through the wilderness of this world, I lighted on a certain place where was a den, [3] and laid me down in that place to sleep; and as I slept, I dreamed a dream. I dreamed, and beheld, I saw a man clothed with rags, standing in a certain place, with his face from his own house, a book in his hand, and a great burden upon his back. Isa 64:6; Luke 14:33; Psalm 38:4....

In this plight, therefore, he went home, and restrained himself as long as he could, that his wife and children should not perceive his distress; but he could not be silent long, because that his trouble increased. Wherefore at length he brake his mind to his wife and children; and thus he began to talk to them: “O, my dear wife,” said he, “and you the children of my bowels, I, your dear friend, am in myself undone by reason of a burden that lieth hard upon me; moreover, I am certainly informed that this our city will be burnt with fire from heaven; in which fearful overthrow, both myself, with thee my wife, and you my sweet babes, shall miserably come to ruin, except (the which yet I see not) some way of escape can be found whereby we may be delivered." At this his relations were sore amazed; not for that they believed that what he had said to them was true, but because they thought that some frenzy distemper had got into his head; therefore, it drawing towards night, and they hoping that sleep might settle his brains, with all haste they got him to bed. But the night was as troublesome to him as the day; wherefore, instead of sleeping, he spent it in sighs and tears. So when the morning was come, they would know how he did. He told them, "Worse and worse:" he also set to talking to them again; but they began to be hardened. They also thought to drive away his distemper by harsh and surly carriage to him; sometimes they would deride, sometimes they would chide, and sometimes they would quite neglect him. Wherefore he began to retire himself to his chamber to pray for and pity them, and also to condole his own misery; he would also walk solitarily in the fields, sometimes reading, and sometimes praying: and thus for some days he spent his time.

Now I saw, upon a time, when he was walking in the fields, that he was (as he was wont) reading in his book, and greatly distressed in his mind; and as he read, he burst out, as he had done before, crying, "What shall I do to be saved?" Acts 16:30, 31.

... I looked then, and saw a man named Evangelist coming to him, and he asked, "Wherefore dost thou cry?"

He answered, "Sir, I perceive, by the book in my hand, that I am condemned to die, and after that to execution; and the thoughts of judgment, Heb. 9:27; and I find that I am not willing to do the first, Job 10: 21, 22, nor able to do the second." Ezek. 22:14.

Then said Evangelist, "Why not willing to die, since this life is attended with so many evils?" The man answered, "Because, I fear that this burden that is upon my back will sink me lower than the grave, and I shall fall into Tophet. Isa. 30:33. And Sir, if I be not fit to go to prison, I am not fit to go to judgment, and from thence to execution; and the thoughts of these things make me cry."

Then said Evangelist, "If this be thy condition, why standest thou still?" He answered, "Because I know not whither to go." Then he gave him a parchment roll, and there was written within, "Fly from the wrath to come." Matt. 3:7.

The man therefore read it, and looking upon Evangelist very carefully, said, "Whither must I fly?" Then said Evangelist, (pointing with his finger over a very wide field,) "Do you see yonder wicket-gate?" Matt. 7:13, 14. The man said, "No." Then said the other, "Do you see yonder shining light?" Psalm 119:105; 2 Pet. 1:19. He said, "I think I do." Then said Evangelist, "Keep that light in your eye, and go up directly thereto, so shalt thou see the gate; at which, when thou knockest, it shall be told thee what thou shalt do."

Legal Texts

Text 6.20: William Boston: Disposition (1517)

The Seyd Dane wyllyam sayth that after [my lord of lincoln and] the abbott of the monastery of Peturburgh had spokyn w't the Townsmen in our lady chappell he hard wordes of soo great contencen by one Water baker mynysterd to Thomas Whetley serveant to the seyd abbott beynge in the chyreh thart the Seyd Dane wyllyam boston thought verely that the Seyd water Baker wold haue vyolently strykyn the Seyd Thomas whetley in thatt holie place of god/ In the exchewynng wherof the Seyd dane wyllyam Boston beynge a lyttull bydyng byed steynd great spread to the seyd Thomas whetley & toke hym w'; hym ffrom the Company of the Seyd watur/ And thys doon the Seyd dane wyllyam boston went to a corteayyn Chamber callydd the Checker for thentent to pay corteayyn money & to solysett other matter & ye he had thair to doo/ wher he fownde a great mulytyde of peapull {of the towne amountynge} as he myght conscenye coniecture to the Number of xl personos or moo beynge in a great marveylous furye and anerge as ytt appeard not onely by the thynge countenance & gesture but also by ther Innumerable {onresonable} opprobrous wordes. and w' Cumpany the afforseyd dane wyllyam boston acordyng to good maner & as tokyn of amytee pryserryd theym to drynck for the Intent Sumwhat to moderater and pacyffye ther great ffurye butt they renounedy ther pryserryd Saying playanly they wold noo/ and porchaunce cometh by Thomas wheateley to whom water baker seyd callyng hym knaue that & ye he cam w'owe the yates he Shuld haue hys head or Crown crackyd/ and Thomas wheteley sayd ayn & ye he gave hym one stryple he shulbe Suer of an other Strype/ Then Seyd Robert Toche ney & ye ye gto to strypes ye shall haue strypes enough emongst yow and therwall the Seyd Dane wyllyam bostyn beynge in great fear went in to the checker & iij men folowing hym w' whom he had corteayyn byssyness. & shytt the doore to hym and then Robert Edward opunly w' an hye exclamacion & dyvrs other dyd banne & curse the abbott of the monastery w' many other shamefull wordes: and emongst all {othere} petur Edward Seyd on to the Company. hard ye nett/ Syrs how ffalsly he (referryyg ytt to the Texts 6.21 and 6.22 have both been shortened considerably. The two texts are not identical, and certainly often spell the “same” words differently, but in both the “same” passages have been reproduced in order to give you some idea of

- the formulaic nature of many legal texts in this period: they both have the same structure, and this could have been further illustrated by looking at both in their totality. They make considerable use of repetition. The formulaic nature of legal texts may also be seen in the Latin beginnings (e.g. the beginning to Text 6.3b: Super primo et secundo articulis dict ict that …) and closings (e.g. the end of 12.3a: … ye or no respondit negative) of court dispositions;
- the continuing use of doublets and triplets, e.g. our especiall grace, certain science and mere motion; given and granted; us, our heires and successours; assignee for ever, free libertin and licence from time to time and at all time for ever hereafter; discover, finde, search out, and view; remote, heathen and barbarous; lands, countreys and territories; etc., etc.;
- the use of future-tense shall, rather than the shall of obligation or the imperative in all persons (marked in bold in 6.13); there is, in contrast, not a single example of the verb will in the full version of either of the texts;
- further points you may discover such as …

Text 6.21: Letters Patent to Sir Humfrey Gylberte (June 11, 1578) (+ Exercise)
Cities, Castles, Townes and Villages, and places in the same, with the rites, royalties and jurisdictions, as well marine as other, within sayd lands or countreyes of the seas thereunto adjoyning, to be had or used with ful power to dispose thereof, & of every part thereof in fee simple or otherwise, according to the order of the laws of England, as near as the same conveniently may be, at his, and their will & pleasure, to any person then being, or that shall romaine within the allegiance of us, our heires and successors, paying unto us for all services, dueties and demaunds, the fift part of all the oare of gold and silver, that from time to time, and at all times after such discoverie, subduing and possessing shall be there gotten: all which hands, countreyes and territories, shall for ever bee holden by the said Sir Humfrey, his heires and assignee of us, our heires and successors by homage, and by the sayd payment of the sayd fift part before reserved onely for all services.

... And forasmuch, as upon the finding out, discovering and inhabiting of such remote lands, countreyes and territories, as aforesayd, it shall be necessarie for the safetie of all men that shall adventure themselves in those journeys or voyages, to determine to live together In Christian peace and civil quietnesse each with other, whereby every one may with more pleasure and profit, enjoy that whereunto they shall attaine with great Paine and peril: wee for us, our heires and successors are likewise pleased and contented, and by these presents doe give and graunt to the sayd sir Humfrey and his heires and assignee for ever, that he and they, and every or any of them, shall and may, from time to time, for ever hereafter within the sayd mentioned remote lands and countreyes, and in the way by the Seas thither, and from thence, have full and meere power and authoritie to correct, punish, pardon, governe and rule by their, and every or any of their good discretions and policies, as well in causes capitall or criminall, as ciuill, both marine and other, all such our subjects and others, as shall from time to time hereafter adventure themselves in the sayd journeys or voyages habitative or possessive, or that shall at any time hereafter inhabite any such lands, countreyes or territories as aforesayd, ...

In witnesse whereof, &c. Witnesse ourselfe at Westminster the 11, day of June, the twentieth yeere of our raigne. Anno Dom 1578.

PER IPSAM REGINAM, &C.

Text 6.22: Charter to Sir Walter Raleigh (1584) (+ Exercise)
And forasmuch as upon the finding out, discovering, or inhabiting of such remote lands, countreis, and territories as aforesaid, it shall be necessary for the safetie of all men, that shall adventure them selves in those iournies or voyages, to determine to liue together in Christian peace, and ciuil quietnes eech with other, whereby eery one may with more pleasure and profit enjoy that whereunto they shall attaine with great Paine and perill, we for vs. our heires and successors, are likewise pleased and contented, and by these presents do giue and graunt to the said Walter Ralegh, his heires and assignee for ever, that he and they, and eery or any of them, shall and may from time to time for euer hereafter, within the said mentioned remote lances and Countreis in the way by the seas thither, and from thence, inane full and meere power and authoritie to correct, punish, pardon, gournerne, and rule by their and eury or any of their good discretion and pollicies, as well in causes capital, or criminal, as ciuil, both marine and other all such our subjects as shall from time to time adventure themselves in the said iournies or voyages, or that shall at any time hereafter inhabite any such lances, countreis, or territories as aforesaide, ...

In witness whereof, we haue caused these our letters to be made patents. Witnesse our selues, at Westminster, the 25. day of March, in the sixed and twentieth yeere of our Raigne.

Text 6.23: The Mayflower Compact (November 11, 1620) (+ Exercise)

In the Name of God, Amen. We, whose names are underwritten, the Loyal Subjects of our dread Sovereign Lord King James, by the Grace of God, of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, &c. Having undertaken for the Glory of God, and Advancement of the Christian Faith, and the Honour of our King and Country, a Voyage to plant the first colony in the northern Parts of Virginia, Do by these Presents, solemnly and mutually in the Presence of God and one another, covenant and combine ourselves together into a civil Body Politick, for our better Ordering and Preservation, and Furtherance of the Ends aforesaid; And by Virtue hereof do enact, constitute, and frame, such just and equal Laws, Ordinances, Acts, Constitutions, and Offices, from time to time, as shall be thought most meet and convenient for the general Good of the Colony; unto which we promise all due Submission In WITNESS whereof we have hereunto subscribed our names at Cape Cod the eleventh of November, in the Reign of our Sovereign Lord King James of England, France, and Ireland, the eighteenth and of Scotland, the fifty-fourth. Anno Domini 1620

Mr. John Carver
Mr. William Bradford
Mr. Edward Winslow
Mr. William Brewster
Isaac Allerton
Miles Standish
John Alden
John Turner
Francis Eaton
James Chilton
John Craxton
John Billington
Joses Fletcher
John Goodman
Mr. Samuel Fuller
Mr. Christopher Martin
Mr. William Mullins
Mr. William White
Mr. Richard Warren
Thomas English
Edward Doten
Edward Liester
Mr. Stephen Hopkins
Digery Priest
John Howland
Thomas Williams
Gilbert Winslow
Edmund Margesson
Peter Brown
Richard Bitteridge
George Soule
Edward Tilly
John Tilly
Francis Cooke
Thomas Rogers
Thomas Tinker
John Ridgate
Edward Fuller
Richard Clark
Richard Gardiner
Mr. John Allerton
Linguistic (pragmatic) point: What is striking about the names of those who signed the Mayflower Compact? Two social criteria seem to be of importance. What are they and why is this?

Text 6.24: John Cotton, Letter to Lord Say and Sele (1636)

Right Honourable,

… It is very suitable to God’s all-sufficient wisdome, and to the fulnes and perfection of Holy Scriptures, not only to prescribe perfect rules for the right ordering of a private man’s soule to everlasting blessednes with himselfe, but also for the right ordering of a man’s family, yea, of the commonwealth too, so far as both of them are subordinate to spiritual ends, and yet avoide both the churches' usurpation upon civil jurisdictions, . . . and the commonwealth’s invasion upon ecclesiastical administrations, in ordine to civil peace, and conformity to the civil state. God’s institutions (such as the government of church and of commonwealth be) may be close and compact, and co-ordinate one to another, and yet not confounded. God hath so framed the state of church government and ordinances, that they may be compatible to any common-wealth, though never so much disordered in his frame. But yet when a commonwealth hath liberty to mould his owne frame . . . I conceive the scripture hath given full direction for the right ordering of the same, and that, in such sort as may best maintain the [vigor] of the church. . . . It is better that the commonwealth be fashioned to the setting forth of God’s house, which is his church: than to accommodate the church frame to the civil state. Democracy, I do not conceive that ever God did ordain as a fit government either for church or commonwealth. If the people be governors, who shall be governed? As for monarchy, and aristocracy, they are both of them clearly approved, and directed in scripture, yet so as referreth the sovereignty to himselfe, and setteth up Theocracy in both, as the best form of government in the commonwealth, as well as in the church.

The law, which your Lordship instanceth in (that none shall be chosen to magistracy among us but a church member) was made and enacted before I came into the country; but I have hitherto wanted sufficient light to plead against it. 1st. The rule that directeth the choice of supreme governors, is of like equity and weight in all magistrates, that one of their brethren (not a stranger) should be set over them, Deut. 17. 15. and Jethro’s counsell to Moses was approved of God, that the judges, and officers to be set over the people, should be men fearing God, Exod. 18. 21. and Solomon maketh it the joy of a commonwealth, when the righteous are in authority, and their mourning when the wicked rule, Prov. 29. 21. Job 34:30. …

. . . Nor neede your Lordship feare (which yet I speake with submission to your Lordships better judgment) that this course will lay such a foundation, as nothing but a mere democracy can be built upon it. . . . where a people choose their owne governors; yet the government is not a democracy, if it be administered, not by the people, but by the governors, whether one (for then it is a monarchy, though elective) or by many, for then (as you know) it is aristocracy. In which respect it is, that church government isjustly denied . . . to be democratical, though the people choose their owne officers and rulers.

Nor neede we feare, that this course will, in time, cast the commonwealth into distractions, and popular confusions. For (under correction) these three things do not undermine, but do mutually and strongly maintain one another (even those three which we principally aim at) authority in magistrates, liberty in people, purity in the church. Purity, preserved in the church, will preserve well ordered liberty in the people, and both of them establish well-balanced authority in the magistrates. God is the author of all these three, and neither is himselfe the God of confusion, nor are his ways the ways of confusion, but of peace....

Now the Lord Jesus Christ (the prince of peace) keepe and bless your Lordship, and dispose of all your times and talents to his best advantage: and let the covenant of his grace and peace rest upon your honourable family and posterity throughout all generations.

Thus, humbly craving pardon for my boldnesse and length, I take leave and rest,

Your Honours to serve in Christ Jesus, J. C. [John Cotton]

Text 6.25: Massachusetts law of 1651

...excess in Apparell ... crept in upon us, and especially amongst people of mean condion, to the dishonor of God, the scandall of our profession, the consumption of Estates, and altogether unsuitable to our poverty. ... our utter detestation and dislike, that men or women of mean condition, should take upon them the garb of Gentlemen, by wearing Gold or Silver Lace, or Buttons, or Points at their knees, or to walk in great Boots; or Women of the same rank to wear Silk or Tiffany hoods, or Scarfes, which tho allowable to persons of greater Estates, or more liberal education, is intolerable in people of low condition." (from: C.

Scientific Texts

Text 6.4a: Robert Copland. Kalender of Shepardes (1508)

Some moving been ["are"] of the skies and planets that exceeded the understanding of Shepherds, as the moving of the firmament: in which been the stars against the first mobile in an hundred year one degree, and the moving of the planets in their epicycles, of which how well the Shepherds be not ignorant of all, yet they make no mention here, for it sufficeth them only of two. Whereof the one is from orient into the occident above the earth, and from occident in the orient under it, that is called the diurnal moving, that is to say that it maketh from day to day xxiii. hours, by which moving the .ix. sky that is the first mobile draweth after, and maketh the other skyes to turn that been under it. (Copland, from 1518 edition, sigs. I7r-I7v; expanded contractions and modernized spelling, qtd. in Johnson 1998: 258)

Text 6.4b: Robert Recorde The Castle of Knowledge (1556)

At the first beginning of the world, when this art was unknown, men marked the rising of the Sun and the Moon, and other notable stars, as the Brood-hen, which is called of many men the Seven stars, and other like: and perceiving them to rise always about the East, and so to ascend by little and little to the South, from whence they did descend again softly to the West, where they did continually set: and the next day again they perceived them to begin their accustomed course, and so continued like as before: wherein although they saw some diversity, yet they perceived that diversity to be uniform, and after a year to return to the old state again. By this occasion they began to imagine that this matter of moving could not be but in a round and circular form, and also in a round and circular body. (Recorde, London 1556: 101, qtd. in Johnson 1998: 258f)

Text 6.5: Isaac Newton. Opticks (1704)

Exper. 8 ... The Book and Lens being made fast, I noted the Place where the Paper was, when the Letters of the Book, illuminated by the fullest red Light of the solar Image falling upon it, did cast their Species ["image"] on that Paper most distinctly: and then I stay’d till the Motion of the Sun, and consequent Motion of his Image on the book, all the Colours from that red to the middle of the blue pass’d over those Letters; and when those Letters were illuminated by that blue, I noted again the place of the Paper when they cast their Species most distinctly upon it: and I found that this last place of the Paper was nearer to the Lens than its former place by about two Inches and an half, or two and three quarters. So much sooner therefore did the Light in the violet end of the Image by a greater Refraction converge and meet, than the Light in the red end. But in trying this the Chamber was as dark as I could make it. For if these Colours be diluted and weakened by the Mixture of any adventitious Light, the distance between the Places of the Paper will not be be great. ... And were the Colours still more full, I question not but that the distance would be considerably greater. (from Burnley 1992: 270)

Literary Texts

Text 6.26: William Dunbar. Lament for the Makaris (1507)

I that in heill wes and gladnes, 5
Am trublit now with great seiknes,
And feblit with infermite;
Timor mortis conturbat me.

Our plesance heir is all vane glory,
This fals warld is bot transitory,
The flesche is brukle, the Fend is sle;
Timor mortis conturbat me.

The stait of man dois change and vary,
Now sound, now seik, now blith, now sary 10
Now dansand mery, now like to dee;
Timor mortis conturbat me.

No stait in erd heir standis sickir;
As with the wynd wavis the wickir,
Wavis this warldis vanite. 15
Timor mortis conturbat me.

On to the ded gois all estatis,
Princis, prelotis, and potestatis,
Baith riche and pur of al degre;
Timor mortis conturbat me. 20

He takis the knychtis in to feild,
Anarmit under helme and scheild;
Victour he is at all mellie;
Timor mortis conturbat me.

That strang unmercifull tyrand
Takis, on the moderis breist sowkand,
The bab full of benigne;
Timor mortis conturbat me.

He takis the campion in the stour,
The capitane closit in t
The lady in bour full of bewte;
Timor mortis conturbat me.

He sparis no lord for his piscence,
Na clerk for his intelligence;
His awfull strak may no man fle;
Timor mortis conturbat me.

Art-magicianis, and astrologgis,
Rethoris, logicianis, and theologgis,
Thame helpis no conclusionis sle;
Timor mortis conturbat me.

In medicyne the most practicianis,
Lechis, surrigianis, and phisicianis,
Thame self fra ded may not supple;
Timor mortis conturbat me.

I se that makaris amang the laif
Plaisis heir ther pageant, syne gois to graif;
Sparit is nocht ther faculte;
Timor mortis conturbat me.

He hes done petuously devour,
The noble Chaucer, of makaris flour,
The Monk of Bery, and Gower, all thre;
Timor mortis conturbat me.

The gude Syr Hew of Eglington, 50
And eik Heryot, and Wyntoun,
He hes tane out of this cuntre;
Timor mortis conturbat me.

That scorpion fell hes done infek
Maister Jothe Clerk, and Jame Afflek,
Fra balat making and tragidie;
Timor mortis conturbat me. 60

Holland and Barbour he hes berevit;

Allace! that he nocht with us levit
Schir Mungo Lokert of the Le;
Timor mortis conturbat me.

Clerk of Tranent eik he has tane, 65
That maid the Anteris of Gawane;
Schir Gilbert Hay endit hes he;
Timor mortis conturbat me.

He hes Blinde Hary and Sandy Traill
Slaine with his schour of mortall haill,
Qhilk Patrik Johnestoun myght nocht fle;
Timor mortis conturbat me.

He hes reft Merseir his endite,
That did in luf so lily write.
So schort, so quyk, of sentence hie; 75
Timor mortis conturbat me.

He hes tane Roull of Aberdene,
And gentill Roull of Cosorphin;
Two bettir fallowis did no man se;
Timor mortis conturbat me.

In Dumfermelyne he hes done roune
With Maister Robert Henrisoun;
Schir Johne the Ros enbrast hes he;
Timor mortis conturbat me.

And he hes now tane, last of aw, 85
Gud gentill Stobo and Quintyne Schaw,
Of quham all wichtis hes pete:
Timor mortis conturbat me.

Gud Maister Walter Kennedy
In poynt of dede lyis veraly,
Gret reuth it wer that so suld be; 90
Timor mortis conturbat me.

Sen he hes all my brether tane,
He will nocht lat me lif alane,
On forse I man his nyxt pray be; 95
Timor mortis conturbat me.

Sen for the deid remeid is none,
Best is that we for dede dispone,
Eftir our deid that lif may we;
Timor mortis conturbat me. 100
Glossary

Makaris are the poets celebrated here; names include Syr Hew of Eglintoun, Heryot, Wyntoun, Maister John Clerk, Jame Afflek, Holland, Barbour (see Texts 9a and b), Hay, Blind Hary (see Text 6.13), Sandy Traill, Patrik Johnesion, Roull, Henrisoun, Schir John the Rot, Stobo, Quintyne Schaw, Walter Kennedy

Timor mortis conturbat me “the fear of death disturbs me”

l. 1: heil “health”
l. 7: brukli “frail”
l. 13: No rank in earth here stands secure.
l. 14: wicker “twig”
l. 22: Ynarmit “armed”
l. 23: mellie “conflict”
l. 26: sowkand “sucking”
l. 29: stour “battle”
l. 33: piscence “puissance”
l. 42: surrigianis “surgeons”
l. 43: supplie “help, defend”
l. 46: syne “then, afterwards”
l. 47: faculte “profession”
l. 49: done devour “devoured”
l. 51: Monk of Bery Lydgate
l. 53: taken
l. 57: done infek “infected”
l. 81: roun “whisper”
l. 87: witcits “men”
l. 90: dide “death”
l. 91: reuth “pity”
l. 93: sen “since”
l. 95: man “must”
l. 98: dispone. Dispose ourselves.

Online text copyright © 2009, Ian Lancashire (the Department of English) and the University of Toronto. Published by the Web Development Group, Information Technology Services, University of Toronto Libraries, at: http://rpo.library.utoronto.ca/poem/769.html

Original text: William Dunbar, /Prints/ (Edinburgh: Chepman and Myllar, 1508).

Text 6.10: King James VI. Reulis and Cautelis (1584)

Ane Schort Treatise, Conteining Some Reulis and cauteleis to be observit and eschewit in Scottis Poesie

The cause why (docile Reader) I have not dedicat this short treatise to any particular personis, (as commounly workis usis to be) is, that I esteme all thais quha hes already som beginning of knawledge, with ane earnest desyre to atteyne to farther, alyke meit for the reading of this worke, or any uther, quhilk may help thame to the atteining to thair foirsaid desyre. Bot as to this work, quhilk is intitulit, The Reulis and cautelis to be observit & eschewit in Scottis Poesie, ze may marvell paraventure, quhairfore I sould have writtin in that mater, sen sa mony learnet men, baith of auld and of late hes already written thairof in dyvers and sindry languages: I answer, That nochtwitstanding, I have lykewayis writtin of it, for twa caussis: ...

Text 6.27: George Puttenham. The Arte of Poesie (1589)

But after a speech is fully fashioned to the common vnderstanding, and accepted by consent of a whole countrey and natio, it is called a language, and receaueeth none allowed alterenation, but by extraordinary occasions by little and little, as it were insensibly bringing in of many corruptiōs that creepe along with the time; of all which matters, we haue more largely spoken in our bookes of the originals and pedigree of the English tong. Then when I say language, I meane the speech wherein the Poet or maker writeth be it Greek or Latine, as our case is the vulgar English, and when it is peculiar vnto a countrey it is called the mother speach of that people: the Greekes terme it Idioma: so is ours at this day the Norman English. Before the Conquest of the Normans it was the Anglesaxon, and before that the British, which as some will, is at this day, the Walsh, or as others affirme the Cornish: I for my part thinke neither of both, as they be now spoken and pronounced. This part in our maker or Poet must be heedyly looked vnto, that it be naturall, pure, and the most usuall of all his countrey: and for the same purpose rather that which is spoken in the kings Court, or in the good towne and Cities within the land, then in the marches and frontiers, or in port townes, where straungers haunt for traffike sake, or yet in Vnuersities where Schollers vse much pecuieus affection of words out of the primatiae languages, or finally, in any vplandish village or corner of a Realme, where is no resort but of poore rusticall or vnciuill people: neither shall he follow the speech of a craftes man or carter, or other of the inferiour sort, though he be inhabitant or bred in the best towne and Cite in this Realme, for such persons doe abuse good speaches by strange accents or ill shapen soundes, and false ortographie. But he shall follow generally the better brought vp sort, such as the Greekes call [charientes] men ciuill and graciously behauoured and bred. Our maker therfore at these dayes shall not follow Piers plowman nor Gower nor Lydgagte nor yet Chaucer; for their langauge is now out of vse with vs: neither shall he take the termes of Northern-men, such as they vse in dayly talke, whether they be noble men or gentlemen, or of their best clarkes all is a matter: not in effect any speech vsed beyond the riuer of Trent, though no man can deny but that theirs is the purer English Saxon at this day, yet it is not so Courtly nor so currant as our Southerne English is, no more is the far Weste mās speech: ye shall therfore take the usuall speech of the Court, and that of London and the shires lying about London within lx. myles, and not much aboue. I say not this but that in euery shyre of England there be gentlemen and others that speake but specially write as goode Southerne as we of Middlesex or Surrey do, but not the common people of euery shire, to whom the gentlemen, and also their learned clarkes do for the most part condescend, but herein we are already ruled by th’English Dictionarie s and other bookes written by learned men, and therefore it needeth none other direction in that behalfe. Albeit peraduenture some small admonition be not impertinent, for we finde in our English writers many wordes and speaches amendable, and ye shall see in some many inkhorne termes so ill affrected brought in by men of learning as preachers and schoolemasters: and many straunge termes of other languages by Secretaries and Marchaunts and trauailours, and many darke wordes and not usuall nor well sounding, though they be dayly spoken in Court. Wherefore great heed must be taken by our maker in this point that his choise be good.

Text 6.6: Sir Philip Sidney. Arcadia (1580s; published 1590) (+ Exercise)

But Basilius to entermixe with these light notes of libertie, some sadder tune, set to the key of his own passion, not seeing there Strephon or Klainz, (who called thence by Vranias letter, were both gone to continue their suite, like two true runners, both employing their best speed, but not one hindring the other) he called to one Lamō of their acquaintance, and willed him to sing some one of their songs; which he redily performed in this doble Sestine.

Strephon. You Gote-heard Gods, that loue the grassie mountaines,
You Nimphes that haunt the springs in pleasant vallies,
You Satyrs joyde with free and quiet forrests,
Vouchsafe your silent eares to playning musique,
Which to my woes giues still an early morning:
And drawes the dolor on till wery euening.

Klainz. O Mercurie, foregoer to the euening,
O heauenlie huntresse of the sauage mountaines,
O louelie starre, entitled of the morning,
While that my voice doth fill these wofull vallies,
Vouchsafe your silent eares to plaining musique,
Which oft hath Echo tir’d in secrete forrests.
Strephon. I that was once free-burges of the forrests,
Where shade from Sunne, and sports I sought at euening,
I that was once esteem'd for pleasant musique,
Am banisht now among the monstrous mountaines
Of huge desaire, and foule afflictions vallies,
Am growne a shriek-owle to my selfe each morning.

Klaius. I that was once delighted euery morning,
Hunting the wilde inhabiter of forrests,
I that was once the musique of these vallies,
So darkened am, that all my day is euening,
Hart-broken so, that molehilles seeme high mountaines,
And fill the vales with cries in stead of musique.

Strephon. Long since alas, my deadly Swannish musique
Hath made it selfe a crier of the morning,
And hath with wailing strëgh clëm'd highest mountaines:
Long since my thoughts more desert be then forrests:
Long since I see my joyes come to their euening,
And state throwen downe to ouer-troden vallies.

... Me seemes I see the high and stately mountaines,
Transforme themselues to lowe deseccted vallies:
Me seemes I heare in these ill-changed forrests,
The Nightengales doo learne of Owles their musique:
Me seemes I feele the comfort of the morning
Turnde to the mortall serene of an euening....

Strephon. These mountaines witnesse shall, so shall these vallies,
Klaius. These forrests eke, made wretched by our musique,
Our morning hymne is this, and song at euening.

... Zelmane. If mine eyes can speake to doo harty errande,
Or mine eyes language she doo hap to iudge of,
So that eyes message be of her receaued,
Hope we do liue yet.

But if eyes faile then, when I most doo need them,
Or if eyes lanuage be not vnto her [Philoclea] knowne,
So that eyes message doo returne rejected,
Hope we doo both dye.

Yet dying, and dead, doo we sing her honour;
So become our tombes monuments of her praise;
So becomes our losse the triumph of her gayne;
Hers be the glory. (qtd. from Farnham 1969: 107-109)

ACT I

SCENE I. Rome. A street.

Enter FLAVIUS, MARULLUS, and certain Commoners

FLAVIUS

Hence! home, you idle creatures get you home:

Is this a holiday? what! know you not,
Being mechanical, you ought not walk
Upon a labouring day without the sign
Of your profession? Speak, what trade art thou?

First Commoner
Why, sir, a carpenter.

MARULLUS
Where is thy leather apron and thy rule?
What dost thou with thy best apparel on?
You, sir, what trade are you?

Second Commoner
Truly, sir, in respect of a fine workman, I am but,
as you would say, a cobbler.

MARULLUS
But what trade art thou? answer me directly.

Second Commoner
A trade, sir, that, I hope, I may use with a safe conscience; which is, indeed, sir, a mender of bad soles.

MARULLUS
What trade, thou knave? thou naughty knave, what trade?

Second Commoner
Nay, I beseech you, sir, be not out with me: yet, if you be out, sir, I can mend you.

MARULLUS
What meanest thou by that? mend me, thou saucy fellow!

Second Commoner
Why, sir, cobble you.

FLAVIUS
Thou art a cobbler, art thou?

Second Commoner
Truly, sir, all that I live by is with the awl: I meddle with no tradesman’s matters, nor women’s matters, but with awl. I am, indeed, sir, a surgeon to old shoes; when they are in great danger, I recover them. As proper men as ever trod upon neat’s leather have gone upon my handiwork.

FLAVIUS
But wherefore art not in thy shop today?
Why dost thou lead these men about the streets?

Second Commoner
Truly, sir, to wear out their shoes, to get myself into more work. But, indeed, sir, we make holiday, to see Caesar and to rejoice in his triumph.

MARULLUS
Wherefore rejoice? What conquest brings he home?
What tributaries follow him to Rome,
To grace in captive bonds his chariot-wheels?
You blocks, you stones, you worse than senseless things!
O you hard hearts, you cruel men of Rome,
Knew you not Pompey? Many a time and oft
Have you climb'd up to walls and battlements,
To towers and windows, yea, to chimney-tops,
Your infants in your arms, and there have sat
The livelong day, with patient expectation,
To see great Pompey pass the streets of Rome:
And when you saw his chariot but appear,
Have you not made an universal shout,
That Tiber trembled underneath her banks,
To hear the replication of your sounds
Made in her concave shores?
And do you now put on your best attire?
And do you now pull out a holiday?
And do you now strew flowers in his way
That comes in triumph over Pompey's blood? Be gone!
Run to your houses, fall upon your knees,
Pray to the gods to intermit the plague
That needs must light on this ingratitude.

FLAVIUS
Go, go, good countrymen, and, for this fault,
Assemble all the poor men of your sort;
Draw them to Tiber banks, and weep your tears
Into the channel, till the lowest stream
Do kiss the most exalted shores of all.

Exeunt all the Commoners

See whether their basest metal be not moved;
They vanish tongue-tied in their guiltiness.
Go you down that way towards the Capitol;

This way will I
disrobe the images,
If you do find them deck'd with ceremonies.

MARULLUS
May we do so?
You know it is the feast of Lupercal.

FLAVIUS
It is no matter; let no images
Be hung with Caesar's trophies. I'll about,
And drive away the vulgar from the streets:
So do you too, where you perceive them thick.
These growing feathers pluck'd from Caesar's wing
Will make him fly an ordinary pitch,
Who else would soar above the view of men
And keep us all in servile fearfulness.

Exeunt

Text 6.7: Milton. Paradise Lost. BOOK 1 (1667) (+ Exercise)

THE ARGUMENT
This first Book proposes, first in brief, the whole Subject, Mans disobedience, and the loss thereupon of Paradise wherein he was plac'd: Then touches the prime cause of his fall, the Serpent, or rather Satan, in the Serpent; who revolting from God, and drawing to his side many Legions of Angels, was by the command of God driven out of Heaven with all his Crew into the great Deep. Which action past over, the Poem hasts into the midst of things, presenting Satan with his Angels now fallen into Hell, describ'd here, not in the Center (for Heaven and Earth may be suppos'd as yet not made, certainly not yet accurst) but in a place of utter darkness, fittest call'd Chaos: Here Satan with his Angels lying on the burning Lake, thunder-struck and astonisht, after a certain space recovers, as from confusion, calls up him who next in Order and Dignity lay by him; they confer of thir miserable fall. Satan awakens all his Legions, who lay till then in the same manner confounded; They rise, thir Numbers, array of Battel, thir chief Leaders nam'd, according to the Idols kno'wn afterwards in Canaan and the Countries adjoyning. To these Satan directs his Speech, comforts them with hope yet of regaining Heaven, but tells them lastly of a new World and new kind of Creature to be created, according to an ancient Propheisie or report in Heaven; for that Angels were long before this visible Creation, was the opinion of many ancient Fathers. To find out the truth of this Propheisie, and what to determin thereon he refers to a full Councel. What his Associates thence attempt, Pandemonium the Palace of Satan rises, suddenly built out of the Deep: The infernal Peers there sit in Councel.

Of Mans First Disobedience, and the Fruit
Of that Forbidden Tree, whose mortal tast the tree
Brought Death into the World, and all our woe, as the
With loss of Eden, till one greater Man reversed
Restore us, and regain the blissfull Seat,
Sing Heav'nly Muse, that on the secret top Of Oreb, or of Sinai, didst inspire
That Shepherd, who first taught the chosen Seed,
In the Beginning how the Heav'n's and Earth chaos.
Rose out of Chaos: Or if Sion Hill
Delight thee more, and Sibo's Brook that flow'd Fast by the Oracle of God; I thence Invoke thy aid to my adventrous Song,
Above th' Aonian Mount, while it pursues
Things unattempted yet in Prose or Rhime.
And chiefly Thou O Spirit, that dost
Before all Temples th' upright heart and pure,
Instruct me, for Thou know'st; Thou from the first
Wast present, and with mighty wings outspread
Dove-like satst brooding on the vast Abyss
And mad'st it pregnant: What in me is dark
Illumin, what is low raise and support;
That to the highth of this great Argument
I may assert Eternal Providence,
And justifie the ways of God to men.

Say first, for Heav'n hides nothing from thy view
Nor the deep Tract of Hell, say first what cause
Mov'd our Grand Parents in that happy State,
Favour'd of Heav'n so highly, to fall off the world
From thir Creator, and transgress his Will
For one restraint, Lords of the World besides? Who first seduc'd them to that foul revolvt?
Th' infernal Serpent; he it was, whose guile
Stird up with Envy and Revenge, deceiv'd
The Mother of Mankind, what time his Pride
Had cast him out from Heav'n, with all his Host
Of Rebel Angels, by whose aid aspiring
To set himself in Glory above his Peers,
He trusted to have equal'd the most High,
If he oppos'd; and with ambitious aim
Against the Throne and Monarchy of God
Rais'd impious War in Heav'n and Battel proud
With vain attempt. Him the Almighty Power
Hurld headlong flaming from th' Ethereal Skie

Glossary

Of Mans First Disobedience, and the Fruit
Reference to the Garden of Eden and eating the forbidden fruit from the tree of knowledge of good and evil source of death which will be reversed only through Christ.
The Creation of the world out of chaos.
With hideous ruine and combustion down
To bottomless perdition, there to dwell
In Adamantine Chains and penal Fire,
Who durst defie th' Omnipotent to Arms.

Nine times the Space that measures Day and Night
To mortal men, he with his horrid crew
Lay vanquish'd, rowling in the fiery Gulfe
Confounded though immortall: But his doom
Reserv'd him to more wrath; for now the thought
Both of lost happiness and lasting pain
Torments him; round he throws his baleful eyes
That witness'd huge affliction and dismay
Mixt with obdurate pride and stedfast hate:
At once as far as Angels kens he views
The dismal Situation waste and wilde,
A Dungeon horrible, on all sides round
As one great Furnace flam'd, yet from those flames
No light, but rather darkness visible
Serv'd onely to discover sights of woe,
Regions of sorrow, doleful shades, where peace
And rest can never dwell, but torture without end
Still urges, and a fiery Deluge, fed
With ever-burning Sulphur unconsum'd:
Such place Eternal Justice had prepar'd
For those rebellious, here thir Prison ordain'd
In utter darkness, and thir portion set
As far remov'd from God and light of Heav'n
As from the Center thrice to th' utmost Pole.
O how unlike the place from whence they fell!
What was lost when Heaven was lost.
There the companions of his fall, o'rewhelm'd
With Floods and Whirlwinds of tempestuous fire,
He soon discerns, and weltring by his side
One next himself in power, and next in crime,
Long after known in Palestine, and nam'd
Beelzebub. To whom th' Arch-Enemy,
And thence in Heav'n call'd Satan, with bold words
Breaking the horrid silence thus began.

Text 6.8: William Congreve  The Way of the World (1700)

The Way of the World
Audire est operae pretium, procedere recte
Qui maechis non vultis.--HOR. Sat. i. 2, 37.
- Metuat doti deprensa.--Ibid.

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE RALPH, EARL OF MOUNTAGUE, ETC.

My Lord,--Whether the world will arraign me of vanity or not, that I have presumed to dedicate this comedy to your lordship, I am yet in doubt; though, it may be, it is some degree of vanity even to doubt of it. One who has at any time had the honour of your lordship's conversation, cannot be supposed to think very meanly of that which he would prefer to your perusal. Yet it were to incur the imputation of too much sufficiency to pretend to such a merit as might abide the test of your lordship's censure.

…

If I am not mistaken, poetry is almost the only art which has not yet laid claim to your lordship's patronage. Architecture and painting, to the great honour of our country, have flourished under your influence and protection. In the meantime, poetry, the eldest sister of all arts, and parent of most, seems to have resigned her birthright, by having neglected to pay her duty to your lordship, and by permitting others of a later extraction to prepossess that place in your esteem, to which none can pretend a better title. Poetry, in its nature, is sacred to the good and great: the relation between them is reciprocal, and they are ever propitious to it. It is the privilege of poetry to address them, and it is their prerogative alone to give it protection.

This received maxim is a general apology for all writers who consecrate their labours to great men: but I could wish, at this time, that this address were exempted from the common pretense of all dedications; and that as I can distinguish your lordship even among the most deserving, so this offering might become remarkable by some particular instance of respect, which should assure your lordship that I am, with all due sense of your extreme worthiness and humanity, my lord, your lordship's most obedient and most obliged humble servant,

WILL. CONGREVE.

PROLOGUE--Spoken by Mr. Betterton.

Of those few fools, who with ill stars are curst,
Sure scribbling fools, called poets, fare the worst:
For they're a sort of fools which fortune makes,
And, after she has made 'em fools, forsakes.
With Nature's oafs 'tis quite a different case,
For Fortune favours all her idiot race.
In her own nest the cuckoo eggs we find,
O'er which she broods to hatch the changeling kind:
No portion for her own she has to spare,
So much she doth on her adopted care.

Poets are bubbles, by the town drawn in,
Suffered at first some trifling stakes to win:
But what unequal hazards do they run!
Each time they write they venture all they've won:
The Squire that's buttered still, is sure to be undone.
This author, heretofore, has found your favour,
But pleads no merit from his past behaviour.
To build on that might prove a vain presumption,
Should grants to poets made admit resumption,
And in Parnassus he must lose his seat,
If that be found a forfeited estate.

He owns, with toil he wrought the following scenes,
But if they're naught ne'er spare him for his pains:
Damn him the more; have no commiseration
For dulness on mature deliberation.
He swears he'll not resent one hissed-off scene,
Nor, like those peevish wits, his play maintain,
Who, to assert their sense, your taste arraign.
Some plot we think he has, and some new thought;
Some humour too, no farce--but that's a fault.
Satire, he thinks, you ought not to expect;
For so reformed a town who dares correct?
To please, this time, has been his sole pretence,
He'll not instruct, lest it should give offence.
Should he by chance a knave or fool expose,
That hurts none here, sure here are none of those.
In short, our play shall (with your leave to show it)
Give you one instance of a passive poet,
Who to your judgments yields all resignation:
So save or damn, after your own discretion.
DRAMATIS PERSONAE.

MEN.

FAINALL, in love with Mrs. Marwood,--Mr. Betterton
MIRABELL, in love with Mrs. Millamant,--Mr. Verbruggen
WITWOUDE, follower of Mrs. Millamant,--Mr. Bowen
PETULANT, follower of Mrs. Millamant,--Mr. Bowman
SIR WILFULL WITWOUDE, half brother to Witwoud, and nephew to Lady Wishfort,--Mr. Underhill
WAITWELL, servant to Mirabell,--Mr. Bright

WOMEN.

LADY WISHFORT, enemy to Mirabell, for having falsely pretended love to her,--Mrs. Leigh
MRS. MILLAMANT, a fine lady, niece to Lady Wishfort, and loves Mirabell,--Mrs. Bracegirdle
MRS. MARWOOD, friend to Mr. Fainall, and likes Mirabell,--Mrs. Barry
MRS. FAINALL, daughter to Lady Wishfort, and wife to Fainall, formerly friend to Mirabell,--Mrs. Bowman
FOIBLE, woman to Lady Wishfort,--Mrs. Willis
MINCING, woman to Mrs. Millamant,--Mrs. Prince
DANCERS, FOOTMEN, ATTENDANTS.

SCENE: London.
The time equal to that of the presentation.

ACT I.--SCENE I.

A Chocolate-house.

MIRABELL and FAINALL rising from cards. BETTY waiting.

MIRA. You are a fortunate man, Mr. Fainall.

FAIN. Have we done?

MIRA. What you please. I'll play on to entertain you.

FAIN. No, I'll give you your revenge another time, when you are not so indifferent; you are thinking of something else now, and play too negligently: the coldness of a losing gamester lessens the pleasure of the winner. I'd no more play with a man that slighted his ill fortune than I'd make love to a woman who undervalued the loss of her reputation.

MIRA. You have a taste extremely delicate, and are for refining on your pleasures.

FAIN. Prithee, why so reserved? Something has put you out of humour.

MIRA. Not at all: I happen to be grave to-day, and you are gay; that's all.

FAIN. Confess, Millamant and you quarrelled last night, after I left you; my fair cousin has some humours that would tempt the patience of a Stoic. What, some coxcomb came in, and was well received by her, while you were by?

MIRA. Witwoud and Petulant, and what was worse, her aunt, your wife's mother, my evil genius--or to sum up all in her own name, my old Lady Wishfort came in.
FAIN. Oh, there it is then: she has a lasting passion for you, and with reason.—What, then my wife was there?

MIRA. Yes, and Mrs. Marwood and three or four more, whom I never saw before; seeing me, they all put on their grave faces, whispered one another, then complained aloud of the vapours, and after fell into a profound silence.

FAIN. They had a mind to be rid of you.

MIRA. For which reason I resolved not to stir. At last the good old lady broke through her painful taciturnity with an invective against long visits. I would not have understood her, but Millamant joining in the argument, I rose and with a constrained smile told her, I thought nothing was so easy as to know when a visit began to be troublesome; she reddened and I withdrew, without expecting her reply.

FAIN. You were to blame to resent what she spoke only in compliance with her aunt.

MIRA. She is more mistress of herself than to be under the necessity of such a resignation.

FAIN. What? though half her fortune depends upon her marrying with my lady's approbation?

MIRA. I was then in such a humour, that I should have been better pleased if she had been less discreet.

FAIN. Now I remember, I wonder not they were weary of you; last night was one of their cabal-nights: they have 'em three times a week and meet by turns at one another's apartments, where they come together like the coroner's inquest, to sit upon the murdered reputations of the week. You and I are excluded, and it was once proposed that all the male sex should be excepted; but somebody moved that to avoid scandal there might be one man of the community, upon which motion Witwoud and Petulant were enrolled members.

MIRA. And who may have been the foundress of this sect? My Lady Wishfort, I warrant, who publishes her detestation of mankind, and full of the vigour of fifty-five, declares for a friend and ratafia; and let posterity shift for itself, she'll breed no more.

FAIN. The discovery of your sham addresses to her, to conceal your love to her niece, has provoked this separation. Had you dissembled better, things might have continued in the state of nature.

MIRA. I did as much as man could, with any reasonable conscience; I proceeded to the very last act of flattery with her, and was guilty of a song in her commendation. Nay, I got a friend to put her into a lampoon, and compliment her with the imputation of an affair with a young fellow, which I carried so far, that I told her the malicious town took notice that she was grown fat of a sudden; and when she lay in of a dropsy, persuaded her she was reported to be in labour. The devil's in't, if an old woman is to be flattered further, unless a man should endeavour downright personally to debauch her: and that my virtue forbade me. But for the discovery of this amour, I am indebted to your friend, or your wife's friend, Mrs. Marwood.

FAIN. What should provoke her to be your enemy, unless she has made you advances which you have slighted? Women do not easily forgive omissions of that nature.

MIRA. She was always civil to me, till of late. I confess I am not one of those coxcombs who are apt to interpret a woman's good manners to her prejudice, and think that she who does not refuse 'em everything can refuse 'em nothing.

FAIN. You are a gallant man, Mirabell; and though you may have cruelty enough not to satisfy a lady's longing, you have too much generosity not to be tender of her honour. Yet you speak with an indifference which seems to be affected, and confesses you are conscious of a negligence.
MIRA. You pursue the argument with a distrust that seems to be unaffected, and confesses you are conscious of a concern for which the lady is more indebted to you than is your wife.

FAIN. Fie, fie, friend, if you grow censorious I must leave you: I'll look upon the gamesters in the next room.

MIRA. Who are they?

FAIN. Petulant and Witwoud.--Bring me some chocolate.

MIRA. Betty, what says your clock?

BET. Turned of the last canonical hour, sir.

MIRA. How pertinently the jade answers me! Ha! almost one a' clock! [Looking on his watch.] Oh, y'are come!

Valentine: Cease to persuade, my loving Proteus.

| Home-keeping youth have ever homely wits. |
| W’re’t not affection chains thy tender days |
| To the sweet glances of thy honoured love, |
| I rather would entreat thy company |
| To see the wonders of the world abroad |
| Than, living dully sluggardized at home, |
| Wear out thy youth with shapeless idleness. |
| But since thou lov’st, love still, and thrive therein – |
| Even as I would, when I to love begin. |

Proteus: Wilt thou be gone? Sweet Valentine, adieu.

| Think on thy Proteus when thou haply seest |
| Some rare noteworthy object in thy travel. |
| Wish me partaker in thy happiness |
| When thou dost meet good hap; and in thy danger – |
| If ever danger do environ thee – |
| Commend thy grievance to my holy prayers; |
| For I will be thy beadsman, Valentine. |

Valentine: And on a love-book pray for my success?

Proteus: Upon some book I love I’ll pray for thee.

Valentine: That’s on some shallow story of deep love –

| How young Leander crossed the Hellespont. |

Proteus: That’s a deep story of a deeper love,

| For he was more than over-shoes in love. |

Valentine: ‘Tis true, for you are over-boots in love,

| And yet you never swam the Hellespont. |

Proteus: Over the boots? Nay, give me not the boots.

Valentine: No, I will not; for it boots thee not.

Proteus: What?

Valentine: To be in love, where scorn is bought with groans,

| Coy looks with heart-sore sighs, one fading moment’s mirth |
With twenty watchful, weary, tedious nights.
If haply won, perhaps a hapless gain;
If lost, why then a grievous labour won;
However, but a folly bought with wit,
Or else a wit by folly vanquished.

Proteus: So by your circumstance you call me fool.
Valentine: So by your circumstance I fear you'll prove.
Proteus: 'Tis love you cavil at. I am not love.
Valentine: Love is your master, for he masters you,
And he that is so yoked by a fool
Methinks should not be chronicled for wise.

Proteus: Yet writers say “As in the sweetest bud
The eating canker dwells, so doting love
Inhabits in the finest wits of all.”
Valentine: And writers say “As the most forward bud
Is eaten by the canker ere it blow,
Even so by love the young and tender wit
Is turned to folly, blasting in the bud,
Losing his verdure even in the prime,
And all the fair effects of future hopes.”
But wherefore waste I time to counsel thee
That art a votary to fond desire?
Once more adieu. My father at the road
Expects my coming, there to see me shipped.

Proteus: And thither will I bring thee, Valentine.
Valentine: Sweet Proteus, no. Now let us take our leave.
To Milan let me hear from thee by letters
Of thy success in love, and what news else
Betideth here in absence of thy friend;
And I likewise will visit thee with mine.

Proteus: All happiness bechance to thee in Milan
Valentine: As much to you at home; and so farewell.

Text 6.30: William Shakespeare: Henry V (c. 1599)

Act 3, Scene 2
GOWER: The Duke of Gloucester, to whom the order of the siege is given, is altogether directed by an Irishman, a very valiant gentleman, 't faith.
FLUELLEN: It is Captain Macmorris, is it not?
GOWER: I think it be.
FLUELLEN: By Cheshu, he is an ass, as in the world: I will verify as much in his heard: be has no more directions in the true disciplines of the wars, look you, of the Roman disciplines, than is a puppy-dog.

Enter MACMORRIS and Captain JAMY

GOWER: Here a' comes; and the Scots captain, Captain Jamy, with him.
FLUELLEN: Captain Jamy is a marvellous falourous gentleman, that is certain; and of great expedition and knowledge in th' aunchient wars, upon my particular knowledge of his directions: by Cheshu, he will maintain his argument as well as any military man in the world, in the disciplines of the pristine wars of the Romans.

JAMY: I say gud-day, Captain Fluellen.

FLUELLEN: God-den to your worship, good Captain James.

GOWER: How now, Captain Macmorris! have you quit the mines? have the pioneers given o'er?

MACMORRIS: By Chrish, la! tish ill done: the work ish give over, the trompet sound the retreat. By my hand, I swear, and my father's soul, the work ish ill done; it ish give over: I would have blowed up the town, so Chrish save me, la! in an hour: O, tish ill done, tish ill done; by my hand, tish ill done!

FLUELLEN: Captain Macmorris, I beseech you now, will you voutsafe me, look you, a few disputations with you, as partly touching or concerning the disciplines of the war, the Roman wars, in the way of argument, look you, and friendly communication; partly to satisfy my opinion, and partly for the satisfaction, look you, of my mind, as touching the direction of the military discipline; that is the point.

JAMY: It sall be vary gud, gud feith, gud captains bath: and I sall quit you with gud leve, as I may pick occasion; that sall I, marry.

MACMORRIS: It is no time to discourse, so Chrish save me: the day is hot, and the weather, and the wars, and the king, and the dukes: it is no time to discourse. The town is beseeched, and the trumpet call us to the breach; and we talk, and, be Chrish, do nothing: 'tis shame for us all: 'tis shame, by my hand, tish nothing done, so Chrish sa' me, la!

JAMY: By the mess, ere these eyes of mine take themselves to slomber, ay'll de gud service, or ay'll lig i' the grund for it; ay, or go to death; and ay'll pay 't as valourously as I may, that sall I suerly do, that is the breff and the long. Marry, I wad full fain hear some question 'tween you tway.

FLUELLEN: Captain Macmorris, I think, look you, under your correction, there is not many of your nation—

MACMORRIS: Of my nation! What ish my nation? Ish a villain, and a bas tard, and a knave, and a rascal. What ish my nation? Who talks of my nation?

FLUELLEN: Look you, if you take the matter otherwise than is meant, Captain Macmorris, peradventure I shall think you do not use me with that affability as in discretion you outh to use me, look you: being as good a man as yourself, both in the disciplines of war, and in the derivation of my birth, and in other particularities.

MACMORRIS: I do not know you so good a man as myself: so Chrish save me, I will cut off your head.

GOWER: Gentlemen both, you will mistake each other.

JAMY: A! that's a foul fault. A parley sounded. … Exeunt.
GOWER: I think Alexander the Great was born in Macedon; his father was called Philip of Macedon, as I take it.

FLUELLEN: I think it is in Macedon where Alexander is born. I tell you, captain, if you look in the maps of the 'orld, I warrant you sall find, in the comparisions between Macedon and Monmouth, that the situations, look you, is both alike. There is a river in Macedon; and there is also moreover a river at Monmouth: it is called Wye at Monmouth; but it is out of my prains what is the name of the other river; but 'tis all one, 'tis alike as my fingers is to my fingers, and there is salmons in both. If you mark Alexander's life well, Harry of Monmouth's life is come after it indifferent well; for there is figures in all things. Alexander, God knows, and you know, in his rages, and his furies, and his wrathes, and his cholers, and his moods, and his displeasures, and his indignations, and also being a little intoxicates in his prains, did, in his ales and his angers, look you, kill his best friend, Cleitus.

GOWER: Our king is not like him in that: he never killed any of his friends.

FLUELLEN: It is not well done, mark you now take the tales out of my mouth, ere it is made and finished. I speak but in the figures and comparisons of it: as Alexander killed his friend Cleitus, being in his ales and his cups; so also Harry Monmouth, being in his right wits and his good judgments, turned away the fat knight with the great belly-doublet: he was full of jests, and gipes, and knaveries, and mocks; I have forgot his name.

GOWER: Sir John Falstaff.

FLUELLEN: That is he: I'll tell you there is good men born at Monmouth.

GOWER: Here comes his majesty.

---

---

Sir Andrew: No faith, I'll not stay a jot longer.

Sir Toby: Thy reason, dear venom, give thy reason.

Fabian: You must needs yield your reason, Sir Andrew.

Sir Andrew: Marry, I saw your niece do more favours to the Count's servingman than ever she bestowed upon me. I saw't i'th' orchard. 5

Sir Toby: Did she see thee the while, old boy? Tell me that.

Sir Andrew: As plain as I see you now.

Fabian: This was a great argument of love in her toward you.

Sir Andrew: 'Slight, will you make an ass o'me?

Fabian: I will prove it legitimate, sir, upon the oaths of judgement and reason. 10

Sir Toby: And they have been grand-jurymen since before Noah was a sailor.

Fabian: She did show favour to the youth in your sight only to exasperate you, to awake your dormouse valour, to put fire in your heart and brimstone in your liver. You should then have accosted her, and with some excellent jests, fire-new from the mint, you should have banged the youth into dumbness. This was looked for at your hand, and this was balked. The double gift of this opportunity you let time wash off, and you are now sailed into the north of my lady's opinion, where you will hang like an icicle on a Dutchman's beard unless you do redeem it by some laudable attempt either of valour or policy. 15

Sir Andrew: An't be any way, it must be with valour, for policy I hate. I had as lief be a Brownist as a politician.

Sir Toby: Why then, build me thy fortunes upon the basis of valour. Challenge me the Count's youth to fight with him, hurt him in eleven places. My niece shall take note of it; and assure thyself, there is no love-broker in the world can more prevail in man's commendation with woman than report of valour. 20

Fabian: There is no way but this, Sir Andrew.
Sir Andrew: Will either of you bear me a challenge to him?
Sir Toby: Go, write it in a martial hand, be curst and brief. It is no matter how witty so it be eloquent and full of invention. Taunt him with the licence of ink. If thou “thou’st” him some thrice, it shall not be amiss, and as many lies as will lie in thy sheet of paper, although the sheet were big enough for the bed of Ware, in England, set’em down, go about it. Let there be gall enough in thy ink; though thou write with a goose-pen, no matter. About it.

Text 7.1: Richard Hakluyt. Discourse of Western Planting (1584) (+ Exercise)

A particular discourse concerning the great necessity and manifold commodities that are like to growe to this Realme of Englande by the Westerne discoveries lately attempted, Written in the yere 1584. by Richarde Hakluyt of Oxforde at the requeste and direction of the righte worshipfull Mr. Walter Raghly noe Knight, before the comynge home of his Twoo Barkes: and is devided into xxj chapters, the titles whereof followe in the nexte leafe.

1. That this westerner discoverie will be greately for thinlargement of the gospel of Christe whereunto the Princes of the reformed religion are cheffely bounde amongst whome her maie ys principall.

2. That all other englishe Trades are growen beggerly or daungerous, especially in all the king of Spayne his Domynions, where our men are driven to flinge their Bibles and prayer Bokes into the sea, and to forsware and renounce their religion and conscience and consequently theyr obedience to her Maie.

3. That this westerner voyadge will yelde unto us all the commodities of Europe, Affrica, and Asia, as far as wee were wonte to travell, and supply the wants of all our decayed trades.

4. That this enterprise will be for the manifold imploymente of members of idle men, and for bredinge of many sufficient, and for utterance of the greate quantitie of the commodities of our Realme.

5. That this voyage will be a great bridle to the Indies of the kinge of Spaine and a meane that wee may arreste at our pleasure for the space of tenne weekes or three monethes every yere, one or twoo hundred saile of his subjectes shippes at the fysshinge in Newfounde lande.

12. That the passage in this voyadge is easie and shorte, that it cutteth not nere the trade of any other mightie Princes, nor nere their Contrieys, that it is to be perfourmed at all tymes of the yere, and nedeth but one kinde of winde, that Ireland beinge full of goodd havens on the southe and west sides, is the nerest parte of Europe to yt, wch by this trade shall be in more securitie, and the sooner drawen to more Civilitie.

15. That spedie plantinge in divers fitt places is moste necessarie upon these luckye westerner discoveries for feare of the daunger of being prevented by other nations wth have the like intentions, wth the order thereof and other reasons therwth all alleged.

17. That by these Colonies the Northwest passage to Cathaio and china may easely quickly and perfectly be searched oute aswell by river and overlande, as by sea, for prove whereof here are quoted and alleged divers rare Testymonies oute of the three volumes of voyadges gathered by Ramusius and other grave authors.

Text 7.2: Banjo Patterson. “Waltzing Matilda” (1887)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>“Waltzing Matilda”</th>
<th>Waltzing “traveling on foot” slang</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Banjo Patterson (Christina Macpherson manuscript)</td>
<td>matilda “bag, swag” colloquial</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oh there once was a swagman camped in the billabong</td>
<td>swagman “itinerant worker” compound of Brit. dialect</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Under the shade of a Coolibah tree</td>
<td>swag “bed-roll” + man</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>And he sang as he looked at the old billy boiling</td>
<td>billabong “waterhole” &lt; Wiradjuri bila “river” + bong</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Yuwaalinyaay gulabaa</td>
<td>coolibah “kind of eucalyptus” &lt;</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Who’ll come a’waltzing Matilda with me</td>
<td>billy “can for boiling water” &lt; Scot.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>dialect bally</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Refrain: a-waltzing a-prefixing; earlier stage in the development of the progressive (see 10.2.3)

Who’ll come a’waltzing Matilda my darling
Who’ll come a’waltzing Matilda with me
Waltzing Matilda and leading a waterbag
Who’ll come a’waltzing Matilda with me

Down came a jumbuck to drink at the billabong
Up jumped the swagman and grabbed him with glee
And he said as he put him away in the tucker bag
“You’ll come a’waltzing Matilda with me” + Refrain

Down came the squatter a’riding his thoroughbred
Down came policemen, one, two and three,
“What’s the jumbuck you’ve got in the tuckerbag?”
“You’ll come a’waltzing Matilda with me.” + Refrain

But the swagman he up and he jumped in the water-hole
Drowning himself by the coolabah tree

Every time Aunty Ifeoma spoke to Papa, my heart stopped, then started again in a hurry. It was the flippant tone; she did not seem to recognize that it was Papa, that he was different, special. I wanted to reach out and press her lips shut and get some of that shiny bronze on my fingers.

“Where do you want to take them [the narrator and her bother]?” Papa asked, standing by the door.

“Just to look around.”

“Sightseeing?” Papa asked. He spoke English, while Aunty Ifeoma spoke Igbo.

“Eugene, let the children come out with us!” Aunty Ifeoma sounded irritated; her voice was slightly raised. “Is it not Christmas that we are celebrating, eh? …”

… “Okay. They can go with you, but you know I do not want my children near anything ungodly. If you drive past mmuo, keep your windows up.”

“I have heard you, Eugene,” Aunty Ifeoma said, with exaggerated formality.

She opened the door only a crack, but two wide hands reached in and forced the door ajar. …

“What is it? Who are you?” Aunty Ifelma asked.

“We are here to search your house. We’re looking for documents designed to sabotage the peace of the university. …”

“Who sent you here?” Aunt Ifeoma asked.

“We are from the special security unit in Port Harcourt.”

“Do you have any papers to show me?? You cannot just walk into my house.”

“Look at this yeye woman [mother] oh! I said we are form the special security unit!” the tribal marks curved even more on the man’s face as he frowned and pushed Aunty Ifeoma aside.

“How you go just come enter like dis? Wetin be dis?” Obiora [Ifeoma’s son and the slightly older cousin of the narrator] said, rising, the fear in his eyes not quite shielded by the brazen manliness in his pidgin English.

Miss Jewel called me every day after school, “Miss Hortense, di boy gone, come help me nuh.” Her colossal leather-worn hands squeezed waterfalls from washing. Her breasts wobbled: two fallen fruit trapped by the waistband of her skirt. Her legs bowed.

“Miss Jewel,” I asked, “why your legs stick out so?”

She solemn, sucked her teeth and said, “Me nuh know, Miss Hortense. When me mudda did pregnant dem she smaddy obeah’er. A likkle spell yah no.” And she sang as she washed. “ ‘Mr Roberts wash him sock at night. And sidung pon de ground.’ ”

“No, Miss Jewel,” I told her, “you are singing the wrong words. It is ‘While shepherds watched their flock by night’.”

“Weh you mean shepherd, Miss Hortense?”

“A shepherd is a man who looks after sheep.”

“Sheep? Dem nuh have none ah dat in Jamaica?”

“No, it is England where the shepherd is, Miss Jewel.”

“Oh, Hengland. Ah deh so de Lawd born ah Hengland?”

Text 8.1: Samuel Johnson. Preface to a Dictionary of the English Language (1755)

When I took the first survey of my undertaking, I found our speech copious without order, and energetick without rules: wherever I turned my view, there was perplexity to be disentangled, and confusion to be regulated; choice was to be made out of boundless variety, without any established principle of selection; adulterations were to be detected, without a settled test of purity; and modes of expression to be rejected or received, without the suffrages of any writers of classical reputation or acknowledged authority.

5

Having therefore no assistance but from general grammar, I applied myself to the perusal of our writers; and noting whatever might be of use to ascertain or illustrate any word or phrase, accumulated in time the materials of a dictionary, which, by degrees, I reduced to method, establishing to myself, in the progress of the work, such rules as experience and analogy suggested to me; experience, which practice and observation were continually increasing; and analogy, which, though in some words obscure, was evident in others.

10

So far have I been from any care to grace my pages with modern decorations, that I have studiously endeavoured to collect examples and authorities from the writers before the restoration, whole works I regard as the wells of English undefiled, as the pure sources of genuine diction. Our language, for almost a century, has, by the concurrence of many causes, been gradually departing from its original Teutonick character, and deviating towards a Gallick structure and phræology, from which it ought to be our endeavour to recal it, by making our ancient volumes the ground-work of style, admitting among the additions of later times, only such as may supply real deficiencies, such as are readily adopted by the genius of our tongue, and incorporate easily with our native idioms.

(at: http://www.gutenberg.org/dirs/etext04/pengl10.txt)

Text 8.2: Definitions from Johnson’s Dictionary (1755)

Tory: (A cant term, derived, I suppose, from an Irish word signifying a savage.) One who adheres to the antient constitution of the state, and the apostolical hierarchy of the church of England, opposed to a whig.

Oats: A grain, which in England is generally given to horses, but in Scotland supports the people.

Lexicographer: A writer of dictionaries; a harmless drudge, that busies himself in tracing the original, and detailing the signification of words.